“Climb the ladder of life with young George throughout the pages of ‘Krisis with a K’... Climb it at your own pace, as you wish and at your own convenience... But climb it bravely and optimistically... Every ‘Krisis’ (from the Greek language “change, evolution...” is similar to a rung of the ladder of life, an opportunity to take advantage of every personal or societal crisis... Live in the "yes" of life and banish the denial that cripples you! Browse the pages of Krisis with a K you won’t find anything negative! And as George did cultivate the magic words, the Philosopher's Stone: Yes, always, thanks, I love you! Open ‘Krisis with a K’ at random. Choose one page without thinking! All the answers you seek are there and inside you.” (G. Taylor)

SYNOPSIS

Krisis with a K. YOU WILL BE DELIGHTED WITH LAUGHTER AND MOVED BY THE PASSAGES DESCRIBED HEREIN... FIND WHY A GHOSTLY SHIP IS SAILING THE PAGES OF THIS BOOK... (“Because hell survives inside you... and your happiness, your Heaven are always in permanent danger.”, page 151”).The ringing of the doorbell –as Destiny does– never forewarns us. It suddenly arrives at your doorstep and comes into your life. Such as the child George enjoyed licking his chocolate-stained fingers, enjoy the challenges which arise before you. If you delve into other horizons and relationships appearing throughout this book you'll know who you are and where you're going to while getting to know the leading character of this novel. When George felt his own death near he then understood life. And after two suicides attempts he learned that if one yearns for death to escape into the arms of oblivion one will not rest after death. Learn from nature and life as George did through his own personal experiences. Enjoy your adventures and the world of dreams, climb mountains and touch the clouds; smile and weep; navigate and dance with life; share and evolve like George did later becoming Jordi and Gorka ...

The novel consists of 200 stories based upon George’s life, legends and mythology from multiple cultures and civilizations. You will find lots of surprises; greetings and conversations translated into languages such as Chinese, Arabic, Russian, German, French, the African Bambara as well as Wolof, Latin, Mayan, Euskara, Gaelic, Catalan, Valencian and some other languages.

G. Taylor donates 80% of the profits generated from the sale of Krisis to UNICEF, The Red Cross and Educo projects carried out in Africa, Asia, India, Central and South America: let’s stop the death of 100 million children from starving.

Live in the "yes" of life and banish the denial that cripples you as it has disappeared from this novel! And cultivate as George did the magic words –the Philosopher’s stone: Yes, always, thanks, I love you!

In order to be honored due to their contributions to culture, conviviality, coexistence and universal solidarity G. Taylor mentions in “Krisis with a K” hundreds of women and men from different walks of life i.e. John F. Kennedy, Luther King and Mandela, John Lennon, Molière, Hermann Hesse, Diana ‘Lady Di’, Chavela Vargas, Jadiyah al-Kubrà, Yanusari, Poe, Michael Jackson and Whitney Houston, Chaplin, Warhol, Marilyn Monroe, Cervantes and Shakespeare, Benedetti, Federico Fellini, Blas de Otero and Mikel Laboa, Teresa de Calcuta and Chiara Lubich, ‘Coco Chanel’, Chopin, Gandhi, Steve Jobs, Nuréiev and Darwin.

“Have you seen the nest where the bird nests and provides heat?
Look around as George did since he was a child and learn from nature!
Look at the endless straws that make a nest.
Who taught the bird such mastery and love?”

“¿Has visto el nido donde el ave empolla y da calor?
¡Observa a tu alrededor como hizo Jorge desde niño y aprende de la naturaleza!
Fíjate en las pajitas incontables que forman un nido.
¿Quién enseñó al pájaro tal maestría y amor?”

“When George felt death near he understood life,
And after two suicides he learnt that if one yearns for death to escape into the arms of oblivion one will find it impossible to relax after death.

Will is the queen of all mental powers!”

“Cuando Jorge sintió cerca la muerte comprendió la vida.
Y después de dos suicidios aprendió que si anhelas la muerte para huir en los brazos del olvido te resulta imposible descansar después de muerto.

¡La voluntad es la reina de los poderes mentales!”

From Krisis con K (Krisis with a K),

Practically everything that catches our attention is seen through the eyes, instead of entering through the door of the heart.

In our eternal existence, we complete cycles which open and then close, fostering the ensuing learning. First there are the dreams and thought, which then, with your will and deeds, are embodied and see the light of day. No freedom bests your freedom of thought. If freedom is a statement of affirmation and an act of will; why should you wish to circumvent it, if it belongs to you and has always been forever a part of you.

Because whatever happens in your life, everything that unflinchingly takes place is what is best for you.

Jorge learned to enjoy the totality of life: tears and smiles.

Let us emulate childhood because in childhood one lives in an ideal world!

As he was snoozing, Jorge had a revelatory dream, replete with surrealist symbolism; he saw what appeared to be the beginning of human existence. And wanted to embrace Love and Freedom to save his youthful (male and female child) soul: the male and female essence, the Greek Androgynos in pure harmony, present in every man and woman. If you decide solely to feel and live in half of your being, the masculine or feminine side only, you will be unhappy. In contrast, the rest of you which experiences feelings is called Happiness.

The ringing of the doorbell such as Destiny, never forewarns. It suddenly lands on your doorstep and comes into your life.

Know that as Homo sapiens we only exist “by reason of being happy and being able to love”.

_ (From the Chapter: Puppy and the sirimiri (fine drizzle))

In the same river of the Nervión Estuary, which seemed to be another city within the same city, retaining its traditions, the friendliness of its people and cuisine of pintxos (tapas), txakoli, Idiazabal cheese and its famous chefs. In the Ongi Etorri gastronomic event, in the Unamuno Plaza in Bilbao, the chef donostiako Juan Mari Arzak gave a seminar that day: "Only if you innovate you're alive. And the best way to do so is to think like a child. All objectives are achieved in utopia." The applause was unanimous.

GAME-ORIENTED AND EDUCATIONAL PROJECT

‘Krisis with a K’, which features cinematographic characteristics, has deliberately been designed in a journalistic style to play with its titles, captions, summaries, short dialogues and sentences that in most of the cases only take up half a line to make the reading and understanding thereof more enjoyable and easier.

The author of the work, the chief character of the novel George (afterwards Jordi and then Gorka...) and other leading characters appearing in the book support and try to favor the reader`s reflection in addition to promoting debates on human and cultural issues and values.

Not only is “Krisis with a K” aimed at entertaining readers with its literary and recreational purpose, but it tries to back up the education of students.

Thanks to its pleasant reading and easy understanding “Krisis with a K” may become a valuable teaching tool to be used by school teachers.

Therefore, “Krisis with a K” may be very instructive to foster human values to ensure global solidarity, freedom and coexistence and so on, as well as respect for nature, shifting towards culture and its expressions. In this way it may be used to train Secondary and High School students on social and humanistic matters in addition to be a book to be analyzed and debated at conservatories of music, reading clubs and literary gatherings.

The digital version of the novel, which will come to light soon, includes links to browse throughout the text.

“When George was about to die he understood the meaning of life. And after two suicide attempts he learnt that meaning if one yearns for death in order to escape into the arms of oblivion one will find out it won’t be possible to relax after death.”

George loathes sexist myths which blame women for all the troubles of the world: Eve’s myth (Hebrew Culture) and Pandora’s one. And he faces troubles that can only be solved by a fairer and more caring world i.e. famine, the use of renewable energies and to strengthen the fight against gender-related violence and wars.
